

There are four principal issues that the Jericho Movement addresses. These issues are:

1. Building the Amnesty Campaign
(A big part of this work is locating political prisoners, compiling dossiers on them, and building the case for amnesty).
2. Continuing the Educational Campaign About the Existence of Political Prisoners inside the U.S.
3. The Jericho Legal Defense Fund.
Providing supportive expenses for lawyers and law students etc. to provide legal defense for political prisoners.
4. The Jericho Medical Project (Fighting for adequate and quality medical care for political prisoners.)

The Jericho Movement

Amnesty and Freedom for All Political Prisoners!

JERICHO IS A MOVEMENT!

A movement with a defined goal of gaining recognition of the fact that political prisoners and prisoners of war exist inside of the United States despite the United States government's continued denial . . . and winning amnesty and freedom for these political prisoners.

Background

The Jericho Movement grew out of a call for a national march on the White House during Spring Break of 1998 by political prisoner Jalil Muntaqim. The call was made in October of 1996 through the Provisional Government—Republic of New Afrika and the New Afrikan Liberation Front, but the organizers decided to use this opportunity to jumpstart a much needed movement to build a national support organization for political prisoners in general.

The Jericho March

Jericho98 was the collective work of over 50 organizations, defense committees and groups, sixty-four Jericho Organizing Committees and Students for Jericho, making the Issue of Recognition and Amnesty for U.S. held political prisoners and prisoners of war a national one with its successful demonstration and rally at the White House.

The organizers who made up the Jericho Organizing Committees were/are just as diverse as the demonstrators who came from all across the United States.

Crossing the spectrum, the Jericho Movement was clear that we had to build a movement that left no political prisoner out there on his or her own again if we were to succeed in winning this struggle against racism, classism, and all forms of oppression.

The Beginning of a New Commitment

The March 27th demonstration was just the beginning of a whole new commitment to supporting these political prisoners and demanding recognition and amnesty for them. There are hundreds of people who went to prison as a result of their work on the street against oppressive conditions like indecent housing and inadequate or complete lack of medical care, lack of quality education, police brutality and murder, and struggling for independence and liberation. These people belonged to organizations like the Black Panther Party, La Raza Unida, FALN, Los Macheteros, North American Anti-Imperialist Movement, May 19th, AIM, the Black Liberation Army, etc., and many were incarcerated because of their political beliefs and acts in support of and/or in defense of freedom.

There is Work to be Done

Once the demonstration was over, the real work began. The Jericho Organizing Committees that came into being around this work continue educating people about the existence of these political prisoners.

The original structure designed to mobilize people to go to the White House and serve notice that we will no longer allow our political prisoners to be behind prison walls with no support and no work being done to free them, is now being transformed into a mass-based organizing tool. At the present time, there are Jericho Organizing Committees operating in California, New York, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Italy, and regional committees functioning across the country. Then, too, Jericho is working with local defense committees to bring the cases of individual political prisoners to the public.

Building a bond across organizational lines is what Jericho is about . . . that's where our strength lies.
